

Employment Roundtable: Navigating the Maze of Employee Complaints

Employers face a potential legal minefield when dealing with employees who report allegations of discrimination, harassment or other workplace taboos. The laws in this area are complex, and employer missteps in dealing with these issues frequently turn minor problems into bottom-line impacting problems down the road.

Please join us on Thursday, September 18, 2014, as Merry Campbell, Co-Chair of Shulman Rogers' Employment Law Group and Suzanne Quintero, discuss these complex laws and how to comply with them, including providing practical guidance for assessing and dealing with these situations. This discussion will focus on:

- Preventative measures
- Proper complaint investigation techniques
- When to call your lawyer
- Knowing "when to hold 'em and when to fold 'em"
