Ryan Malet has extensive experience handling residential and commercial real estate transactions throughout the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. Ryan approaches each deal—regardless of size—with an integrative approach and works seamlessly with buyers, sellers and lenders. He works to provide the highest level of service to his clients, who appreciate and have come to expect his client-centric approach. Ryan takes the time to fully understand the goals of each client and develop individualized and practical solutions to bring each matter to a successful completion.

Clients have shared that Ryan is “knowledgeable, extremely responsive and clear as to what we needed to do on our end to get things done.” He is in constant communication with his clients and is committed to keeping them updated on the status of their transaction.

Prior to joining Shulman Rogers, Ryan worked as an in-house attorney for a large quasi-governmental agency in Washington, D.C., providing advice and counsel on general legal issues as well as drafting, reviewing and negotiating various types of transactional agreements. He is a zealous advocate for clients, consistently delivering successful outcomes.

Ryan earned his Juris Doctor from the University of Baltimore School of Law and his Bachelor of Arts from Hobart College. Licensed to practice law in Maryland and Washington, D.C., he is also a licensed title producer in Maryland, Washington, D.C. and Virginia. Ryan is a respected member of the local real estate law community and is an active member of the Young Professionals Network for the Greater Capital Area Association of Realtors.
