Alison Graham helps clients navigate commercial and residential real estate disputes. As an experienced litigator, Alison presents her arguments with confidence and composure. She stands her ground even in the most complex disputes or when facing a less-than-favorable set of facts.

As a shareholder, Alison assists individuals and organizations involved in landlord-tenant and contract disputes involving housing discrimination, property contamination and defects, broker misconduct, mortgage fraud and premises liability.

Alison's clients often face issues that hinge on the interpretation of a particular phrase in a contract. She is adept at analyzing and carefully dissecting case law and statutes to find support for her position and build a strong foundation for her case.

In recognition of her extensive knowledge of landlord-tenant matters, Alison was recently appointed to serve a three-year term as a Commissioner with the Montgomery County, Maryland Office of Landlord-Tenant Affairs. She also serves as Vice-Chair of the firm's Landlord-Tenant Practice.
