

Child Support, Contempt and Enforcement

Our attorneys are experienced in advising our clients of the law in Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia regarding child support, health insurance and extraordinary medical and other expenses related to the support of children. Each of these jurisdictions has its specific child support guidelines but are all based on the parents' combined incomes which are used to calculate the appropriate amount of support to be paid considering the parenting time arrangement.

When a parent is ordered to pay child support and fails to do so, it is necessary to seek enforcement of the child support order. There may also be changes in the financial or other circumstances requiring a recalculation of child support.

Our attorneys can advise and represent you whether you are the payor or payee of child support based on the law of each jurisdiction. Additionally, there may be issues affecting what child support laws apply if the parents live in different jurisdictions. Our attorneys can help you navigate the law on these important issues.
