Will Schroeder represents business owners when they need not only a litigator with an established record, but also a passionate advocate who can “think outside the box” to help them achieve their objectives. Clients appreciate working with him because he commits to their goals and continues to strive for creative solutions to difficult problems.

With a practice that spans over 15 years, Will has gained a wide breadth of litigation experience in a variety of matters throughout the Washington Metropolitan Area. Through his representation of owners, buyers, sellers, and contractors in real estate, construction, and contract disputes, he has achieved success not only in the courtroom, but also by obtaining favorable outcomes before trial.

Over the course of his career, Will has won numerous cases based upon his deep knowledge of applicable business law, his attention to detail, and problem-solving skills. Clients benefit from his experience as a more efficient litigator, which often saves his clients both time and money. In particular, Will can provide clients with creative solutions for difficult computer and electronic discovery issues that can otherwise become very costly.
