SHULMAN ROGERS

Federal Tort Claims Act

Military Accidents & Medical Malpractice Under the Federal Tort Claims Act

For over 40 years, Shulman Rogers has been a leader in representing clients in Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA) cases. Our seasoned attorneys, some of whom have served in the Army Claims Service, bring invaluable depth of experience to the FTCA process. If you or a family member have experienced medical malpractice or negligence in a military hospital, or have been involved in an accident with a government vehicle or aircraft, you may be eligible to seek damages under the FTCA.

Navigating the FTCA Process

Filing an FTCA claim involves navigating a unique set of rules and deadlines that differ from typical personal injury cases. The process requires a deep understanding of federal and state law along with federal procedures, codes and regulations. Our legal team excels in guiding clients through every step of the FTCA administrative claim process and subsequent litigation.

Our Expertise

Shulman Rogers successfully handles FTCA cases arising from major military bases and hospitals nationwide including Fort Belvoir, Naval Hospital Jacksonville, NAS Pensacola, Fort Benning, Walter Reed and more. Our cases encompass a wide range of incidents from auto and aircraft accidents to birth injuries, surgical errors, medical misdiagnoses and wrongful death. In 2024, our team secured many significant verdicts for clients, including two multimillion-dollar outcomes.

We also represent military families in claims such as the Camp Lejeune toxic water cases.

Understanding Your FTCA Rights

FTCA claims can be complex and confusing. It is important to clarify common misconceptions from the onset such as eligibility for active-duty personnel, rights of military families, jurisdictional considerations and statute of limitations issues.
