William B. Schroeder is a Counsel at Shulman Rogers whose practice centers on commercial litigation across Maryland, Virginia, and Washington, D.C. With more than 15 years of experience, Will represents business owners, home builders, land developers, and contractors in disputes that demand both technical legal skill and creative problem-solving. He is known for his commitment to his clients' goals and his ability to identify unconventional paths to favorable outcomes.

Will's litigation practice spans real estate, construction, and contract disputes, with a track record of success both at trial and through pre-trial resolution. He has served as lead counsel in bench and jury trials throughout the Washington Metropolitan Area and has argued before Maryland's appellate courts. His clients benefit from his efficiency as a litigator — an approach that consistently saves time and reduces cost without sacrificing results.

A recognized authority on electronic discovery, Will brings particular depth to cases involving complex e-discovery challenges. He helps clients navigate the technical and financial demands of computer and electronic discovery issues that can otherwise become significant litigation burdens, offering practical, cost-conscious strategies that protect his clients' interests.
